SITTING BULL KILLED

His Band Attacked by Troops and [illegible]

[illegible] Big [illegible] Wounded

All [illegible] Killed [illegible]

General Brooke [illegible] Against [illegible] Without Delay

[illegible] Mr [illegible] A [illegible] N D special says [illegible] received here this [illegible] to the effect that Sitting Bull's camp was attacked by troops and him [illegible] warriors killed The remainder of the band are now in retreat up the Grand river but it is not yet known definitely along which fork their trail will lie

Information of the most reliable nature was received to day that a band of eight wigwams were encamped on the Little Missouri [illegible] Pretty Buttes It is probable that the fugitives will make this camp their objective point They will not be able without great exertion to reach the forks of Grand river to day It is intimated that 150 warriors are in the band and this number is likely to be increased by other bands

Lieutenant Casey with a troop of the First cavalry is headed for the north end of the Powder River range opposite the mouth of the Box Elder creek Captain Fountain with a troop of the Eighth cavalry with pack trains which will leave here in the morning for White Buttes will probably intercept the band before it reaches the Little Missouri If not Lieutenant Casey and Captain Adams will do so

Settlers who are aware of the movements of the troops are little alarmed, as the weather is such that intelligence of disturbances and of movements travels rapidly and it is well known that the troops have the situation well in hand A general outbreak on the Sioux reservation is not feared and those disaffected bands which are now giving trouble will soon be placed where they will cease to be a cause of alarm for the settlers

The Sioux reservation is surrounded by troops thoroughly equipped for a winter's campaign in the most difficult country All are in communication with each other and department headquarters No outbreak can become general in the face of the precautions already taken and the wild rumors which have caused the populations of entire valleys to fly for their lives are malicious and groundless

The arch villain is dead and his followers will soon lose their energy in following his teachings The troops are hot on their trail and before another sun has set Sitting Bull's celebrated chorus of dancers will be good Indians or prisoners

General Brooke's Intentions

[illegible] General Brooke in command of the troops at Pine Ridge telegraphed this evening to Adjutant General Corbin at army headquarters, as follows All the Indians who can be brought in are now here or near here leaving about 200 bucks in the Bad Lands who refuse to listen to anyone or anything Against these hostiles I will send a sufficient force to capture or fight them The Indians now out have a great many stolen horses and cattle with them I hope to be able to end this matter

A dispatch from General Brooke said that reports received by him on the night of the 13th showed a decidedly hostile intent on the part of the Indians in the Bad Lands He feared that the collision between some of the settlers and Indians had turned the scale

Financial Relief Measures

Washington December 15—The republican senatorial caucus committee has been in session all the afternoon, listening to the views of the secretary of the treasury He gave his endorsement to the proposition embodied in the Plumb and Sherman bills to reduce the compulsory holding of bonds by national banks and thought very well of the two per cent bond project To secure immediate relief however and to strengthen the price of silver he favored the immediate purchase of $13 000 000 worth of surplus silver bullion

After two or three hours deliberation and consultation the sub committee succeeded in reaching a decision as to the nature of their report and their act was promptly ratified by the full committee and will be submitted to the caucus to night in the shape of a bill to be drafted by Senator Sherman

The main features of the measure will be A provision for the purchase of the silver surplus within one year the purchases on this account not to exceed three million dollars in any one month in addition to the purchase of four and one half million ounces per month now required by law the issue of 2 per cent bonds not to exceed one hundred million dollars in amount and the purchase of sufficient silver bullion in addition to the [illegible] requirements to meet the deficiency in national bank circulation whenever the circulation falls below $180 000 000 (by loans of the issue of treasury notes based upon the bullion thus purchased In case bullion in sufficient amount to meet this deficiency cannot be obtained, the deficiency in the circulation is to be met by the issuance of ordinary treasury notes

In addition the bill will contain a clause providing that when the price of silver shall for each year remain constantly at or above the level (par) with gold any holder of bullion may deposit it with the treasury and have it coined into standard silver dollars or receive treasury notes therefor

Among the gentlemen present were Jay Gould C P Huntington Russell Sage J J McCook, President R R Cable of the Rock Island President H H Porter of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois President Hughitt of the Chicago and Northwestern Vice President M L Sykes and W H Newman of the same road and George M Pullman

The Labor Meeting

Last night's meeting in Durkee hall under the auspices of local union No 515 Carpenters and Joiners of North America was no less a success in point of attendance than in the interest manifested [illegible] The meeting was called to order [illegible] organization [illegible]

[illegible] He thought it a necessity [illegible] been [illegible] hundred years [illegible] the Ch[illegible] was necessary [illegible] and development of governments among men and it was equally necessary among laboring people for the protection of their rights He mentioned with pleasure the presence of representatives of the church as showing that the church was alive to the fact it was a part of its work to help lift the heavy burdens from the shoulders of labor

Rev [illegible] gave a short but interesting and instructive talk in which he classed the people of the world as of two kinds those who think and those who do not think Labor organizations he thought were wise and salutary when the members of them were careful of not only their own rights but thoughtful of the interests of those from whom they received employment Trades assemblies and labor unions should always seek to do the square thing by employers as well as by employes In this way the rights and privileges of both would be conserved and enhanced He too thought it a part of the real work of the church to help lift up the laboring people to a higher plane and felt that this end could best be promoted by a cordial sympathy and co operation with labor in its efforts for the betterment of its condition

Professor [illegible] was the next speaker introduced and opened his remarks by a reference to the difference in the atmosphere of this and other countries and the present and the past so far as the discussion of questions affecting the interests of the people was concerned The times were not the times of old in England Russia or Germany nor of the days when men were imprisoned or suffered death for daring to think and to give utterance to their honest thoughts and it was not necessary in free America to discuss social or economic problems under the blood red banner of anarchy on which the words Down with law were inscribed He would not attempt a lengthened discussion of social questions but desired to impress it upon the minds of his hearers that intelligence could in the end solve all the vexed problems of our day He advocated a library for the working people the reading of good books upon the questions of vital interest to them and the discussion of these questions in the assembly room and in their homes Then if unreasoning partisanship were cast aside and a ballot cast which expressed the honest and intelligent judgment of the voter the serious social problems which confront the civilized world would be in a fair way of solution

The last speaker was Editor Moore of the Colorado Workman published at Pueblo Mr Moore thought the great issues which confronted the American people to-day were those of finance land and transportation The cry of over-production he thought was a misleading one, raised to obscure the real points at issue He believed in the right of labor to organize for its protection and in its duty to do so labor should cast aside party shackles and cast its ballot for those who would really represent the people The corporations and monopolists had been favored by state and national legislation too much already—it was time for a change and the tidings from Kansas Nebraska and other states encouraged him to believe that the people were about to take the government into their own hands He rejoiced at the presence of the clergy and suggested that the church ought to know that the people had not drifted away from the church but the church from the people

Chairman Bull who leaves to day for home in Pennsylvania in a few well chosen words bade his friends good bye and the audience was dismissed

Local Union No 514 has a membership of about 400 and is in a flourishing condition It is understood that last night's meeting was only the first of a series of similar meetings

Strange Suicide

A strange case of suicide was reported from the southern part of the county yesterday The facts of the case are as follows Late Friday evening Grant Collins and another cow boy in the employ of Perkins Bros whose ranch is near the Fremont county line were riding in the mountains and came upon a man lying by the side of a stream of water He had on neither coat nor hat but had an old sack wrapped around his shoulders As the men came up one of them remarked that it was a case for an inquest but the apparently dead man sat up and remarked not yet but soon would be He was a Mexican and apparently about 40 years of age He declared that he had walked from Pueblo and had spent two days and nights in the mountains and that for four days and nights he had neither partaken of food or drink He had come there with the express purpose of dying and proposed to do so The men questioned him closely but he would tell nothing regarding himself He declared that he had committed no crime They tried to induce him to leave and tried to force him but he fought them off declaring that if they left him alone for two days longer he would be dead The men were finally compelled to leave him On Saturday they were unable to go and look after the suicide but Sunday they went to the spot and found him dead The occurrence was in Fremont county just across the line, and the authorities have been notified

The territory of Oklahoma wants to be a state. If the legislature of Oklahoma is representative of the territory, it is far from being fit for statehood

We are glad to observe signs that the republican senators are thinking of dropping the force bill. It may be consistency to keep hold of a hot poker but it is common sense to let go

There is presumably an inside history to the speculation in silver which the public are anxious to know. If there is any chance that senators or representatives are mixed up in it in any dishonest way there is all the more reason for investigation. The truth can hurt none but the guilty

An instance of the good which may sometimes be done by labor unions, was afforded by the meeting last evening. Colorado Springs workmen are intelligent and self respecting, anxious to improve every opportunity for education and culture, and an illustration of this fact is found in the large audience gathered to listen to the addresses of Mr Gregg and President Slocum.

The announcement is made by the state auditor and treasurer that Colorado has a debt varying from one half to one and a half million dollars according to the way it is calculated. It is to be hoped that this announcement will lead to the discovery of the reason, if there is any, why Colorado should have a debt at all, and also what the state has to show for the money it has spent, besides the foundations for a capitol, and a whole lot of experience

With the death of Sitting Bull the chief instigator, if not the chief cause, of the Indian trouble is removed. He was a thoroughly bad Indian, and it is not on record that any deed of virtue ever marred his record of consistent wickedness. His power among his fellows he owed more to cunning than his ability and he maintained his authority by playing upon the superstition of his followers rather than by his fitness to lead. A medicine man rather than a warrior, he often, as in the Custer campaign, gained credit for what wiser heads planned and braver arms executed. He was the leader of the new religious craze, the self-appointed forerunner of the Indian Messiah. His death settles one thing. The Indians of the new dispensation are not impervious to white men's bullets. His evil doing merited death long ago, and hundreds of Dakota mothers will sleep quieter because Sitting Bull is dead. His death will undoubtedly have a dispiriting effect on the hostiles. Had it occurred earlier, it might have prevented any further trouble. As it is it will hasten the inevitable surrender and peace

THE RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION

The restriction of foreign immigration is not the most prominent of the questions now before congress, but there is certainly none of more deep and permanent importance to the nation. We justly pride ourselves on the average intelligence of our citizens, we resent any attack on the system of public schools which makes that intelligence possible, and we recognize that our free institutions are only possible with an enlightened nation. We have not been afraid to admit to our political partnership a number of ignorant though well meaning foreigners, because our experience has shown that these have been absorbed into the body politic with very little harm. But the increasing volume of immigration, the accumulation of foreign elements in our land, and especially the deterioration in the character of these immigrants seem to point with an emphasis that is not to be disregarded to the necessity of restriction. However poor and ignorant an immigrant may be, he is to be welcomed to these shores if he is industrious and ready to learn. America makes no vain boast in offering to the degraded and oppressed of all lands freedom and an upward chance. It is not of what the immigrant has not but of what he has that we may complain. We welcome the refugee from tyranny but not the refugee from law. The foreigner who does not understand our institutions we may teach, but he who fights against them is a public enemy from the start. We can stand a large amount of alienism in the country, provided it is transitory. The greatest danger to us is from those who teach their children to be foreigners

Considering the benefit that has resulted to our country from immigration in earlier and later years it may well seem doubtful whether the bill proposed by Congressman Lodge is advisable. There can be no doubt that the educational qualification proposed would exclude a large number of those who are the most injurious. But would it not also exclude many who are of undoubted benefit? Is it wise to impose upon immigrants educational qualifications which are not required of even our own voters?

It is a further objection to this educational qualification that it does not require the necessary amount of education to be in English. What good will it do the country that intending immigrants should be able to read and write Hungarian or Polish? Is it not true that the most dangerous elements of our society to-day are those men who conspire and plot, those who write and read the papers in foreign languages those who keep a lively interest in old world quarrels and to satisfy their whims seek to embroil this government and those who persist in maintaining schools whose least thought is to teach Americanism

However, this bill would certainly be better than no bill at all and it would probably be considerably modified before ever it went through congress. If the national legislature should ever have time to spare from such momentous questions as the force bill, this is one of the problems they might profitably consider

Dillon on the Irish Division.

NEW YORK December 15 —John Dillon since his two colleagues sailed last Saturday morning has been in constant communication with his friends in Ireland and has watched the movements of Parnell with interest. He has prepared and given to the press a statement as to the more recent events in Ireland in which he says "In the miserable quarrel now going on in Ireland my main object has been from the outset to induce both sides to abstain from all bitterness of feeling which might render it difficult for members to fight together in the future as comrades for Ireland as we have done for the past ten years. And with this view I used any influence I possessed to prevent the war being carried into Ireland till all possible means of bringing it to an end, to close had been abandoned

The Kilkenny action has been precipitated and I am sincerely sorry so far as personally offensive attacks on Mr Parnell. Although it must be admitted that the cruelly unjust charges he has levelled against members of his party and the extraordinary violence of the methods by which he has sought to suppress all expression of opinion hostile to himself, renders it very difficult for his opponents to maintain an attitude of moderation. I still have hopes that the conference between Mr Parnell and Mr O Brien may restore unity to our party

But in the meantime Mr Parnell has plunged Ireland into a conflict which wrings the heart of every Irishman with pity and humiliation. He has done this for a purely personal end and without pausing, even for a brief interval to see whether some means might not be discovered by which to rescue the Irish cause from the dreadful position into which his acts have brought it, and I feel bound to say that since he commenced his Irish campaign Mr Parnell has used language and done acts revolting to every free-born man and if I could meet him in Ireland I should tell him to his face that unless he very much altered his course and methods of procedure he was—quite apart from English precedent—no fit leader for a nation seeking to be free

Priests Denounce Parnell

DUBLIN December 15 —At the Franciscan church at Ennis yesterday the friars denounced Parnell, both for his moral and political actions. Several members of the congregation because of the utterances of the friars left the church

The priests in the cathedral at Ennis made no comment upon Mr Parnell's course

Oklahoma's Desire

TOPEKA, December 15 —Ed P Greer, editor of the Winfield (Kas ) Courier and principal owner of the Capital at Guthrie, Okla , says that the people of Oklahoma will send a strong lobby to Washington this winter to work for the admission of the territory to the sisterhood of states. They are confident that they will succeed in getting a statehood bill through congress so that they will be authorized to form a full state government

Keene as Louis XI.

The largest audience that has assembled in the Colorado Springs opera house for some time witnessed Thomas Keene last night in a production of Louis XI. Those who attended had no reason to regret it, for the performance was thoroughly finished and artistic. In the minds of most old time Colorado Springs theatre goers the character of Louis XI is identified with the late W E Sheridan, and there were those among them who held that they never again expected to see his like. They were pleasantly disappointed however in Keene and were willing to admit it. The version of the play given last night was very similar to the one played by Sheridan and one can easily believe that Keene may have been a student of that great but unfortunate actor. The Louis XI of the play is a crafty old dotard wavering betwixt fear of heaven, death and the loss of crown, and yet revengeful cruel and wicked. Keene's art is perfect and never once did he forget that he was the dispicable king of France through the long and trying scenes

The supporting company was good throughout. George Learock sustained the character of the Duke de Nemours with credit until the most trying scene, that in the bed chamber when he mouthed his words. John Griffith as Oliver, gave a good bit of character acting and the Jacques Coitier, of Frank Hennie was excellent. The Marie of Miss L Shannon, was generally good. Her elocution is good but her manner at times is not pleasing

It is to be hoped that Keene will include Colorado Springs in his annual tour hereafter
